Britain's Justin Rose, Australia's Marc Leishman and Americans Xander Schauffele and Will Zalatoris are all tied on -7 and hoping for a slip up from Matsuyama, who would become the first Japanese to win a Major if he holds on.It'll be fascinating to see what happens among those iconic azaleas and super-fast greens from this point — which is why so many people will be wondering how to watch a Masters live stream today.The good news is that there are lots of ways you can tune in to a Masters live stream, wherever you are in the world. Masters live stream: How to watch the Masters 2021 anywhere via a VPNWorried about how to watch the Masters 2021 if you're away from home and can't access your usual streaming services? Fear not — because you can still get the live streams with a virtual private network, or VPN. A VPN makes it so that you can appear to be surfing the web from your home town, so you can access the same streaming services you've already paid for. Not sure which is the best VPN for you? We've tested many different services and our favorite is ExpressVPN (opens in new tab). It offers superb speeds and excellent customer service. But you've got other VPN options as well.Masters live stream: how to watch the Masters 2021 live online in the US(Image credit: Shutterstock)If you're in the U.S. and want to watch a Masters live stream of the final round, the simple answer is that you need CBS. Alternatively, you could tune into the final round of the Masters 2021 live stream via CBS' new Paramount Plus streaming service. It costs just $5.99 per month with ads or $9.99 without. And don't forget, if you're usually based in the U.S. but aren't at home right now you can still watch the services you subscribe to by using a VPN such as ExpressVPN (opens in new tab).Masters live stream: how to watch the Masters 2021 live online in the UK(Image credit: Shutterstock)As is usually the way with the major golf tournaments, Sky Sports is the place to go to watch a Masters live stream in the U.K. If you don't already subscribe, you could sign up for the basic Sky package plus the Sky Sports Golf channel (opens in new tab) for £36 per month. (Turns out movies seem a lot less special when they are just spat out onto a streaming service.)If the ratings for the pandemic-era Emmys and Golden Globes can tell us anything, it's that people are even less interested in awards shows when they are taking place virtually (or maybe we're just not in the mood to watch Hollywood celebrate itself). The Oscars will at least try to maintain a semblance of normality by bringing most of the (tested, probably vaccinated) stars together in one room, so if you want to watch, here's how to do it. It's still on TVThe ratings are dropping, but we're still a long way from the Oscars being booted off of a major network. As usual, your local ABC affiliate will carry the ceremony live, beginning at 8 p.m. ET on Sunday, April 25. If you want to catch the pre-show—though this year's red carpet festivities will reportedly be “teeny tiny”—that kicks off at 6:30 p.m. ET.How to stream the Oscars online live in New York City and still can't manage to get a good over-the-air digital signal to save my life, so I'll be watching online—and you might be able to, as well!G/O Media may get a commissionVia ABC.comThe awards will stream live on the ABC website, but unfortunately you won't be able to head there to watch them without signing on via your pay TV provider, whether cable or satellite. Which, if you have those options, probably means you are less reliant on online streaming anyway, but that's how it goes.Via a “live TV” streaming serviceIf you're a cord-cutter, you can also watch the show via various streaming services offering a live TV option, including Hulu Live TV, YouTube TV, and FuboTV, each of which offers access to your local ABC affiliate. If you don't already subscribe to one of those services and you don't mind burning your free trial just to catch the awards, you can sign up for each of them for 7 days and cancel before you're charged—just don't forget, as these services carry a much higher monthly fee than the standard $8-$15 you'll typically pay for a streaming service.For free via The Roku ChannelThere is one surefire, free way to stream the 2021 Academy Awards, and it's all thanks to Roku. The ceremony will stream live via The Roku Channel, and you can watch it online or with a mobile device by creating a free account; you can then cast the stream to your TV if you've got a compatible device like a Chromecast.If you own a Roku device and want to watch on your TV, add the ABC News Live channel and load it up when the show starts. You can watch both the pre-show and the main event via this method, all without swearing as you adjust that useless digital antennae you paid $60 for. Life in GeneralEntertainmentStreaming
